Antics galore capture the everyday challenge of having siblings

Who did it? Four sisters – different ages, different interests, but all bursting with energy – are about to bounce, leap, trip, and tumble right into trouble. As they charge full speed ahead into their high-spirited day – grabbing brushes, squeezing paste, splashing water in their haste, washing faces, combing hair, soggy towels tossed everywhere – each blames the others for one mishap after another until finally they are all in trouble. Only then do they discover that having siblings can be useful, and fun!

With its exuberant illustrations and perceptive insights into family dynamics, this funny, mischievous romp in verse will have even the youngest listeners chiming in with glee, “She did it!”
