A Remarkable Victorian Woman - Marie Beauclerc Helen Blain

This biography traces Marie Beauclerc's life of fearless determination during the Victorian era of rigid gender and class prejudice. It is a fitting tribute to a strong-minded 19th century trail blazer who left school at age nine. While still a child she taught herself shorthand, later becoming the first female reporter in England, and the first woman teacher in an English boys' public school (Rugby). The mystery of Maria Bethell's change of surname at the age of four, to the French name Beauclerc which means good scholar, and later another name change from Maria to Marie adds intrigue to her story.
