How NOT to Pick a Loser - Dating Advice for the Second Time Around (New Age Book 1) Gennifer Dooley-Hart

20 pages / 2,200 words

I wrote this little guide because I thought others would find it helpful. I'm not a professional palmist, just an interested amateur who has long found the subject fascinating.

Why would the lines on people's palms be so very different? Some people have short lines, some long, some curved, some straight, some deeply etched and others barely there at all. Some people's palms just have the basic Head, Heart and Life Lines, while others have so many lines they look like Grand Central Station terminus!

It's confusing, right? Yet if you consider that lines on the palm of the hand can and do change over time, and are willing to accept that it is the palm's human owner who is causing these changes, then you will also be likely to accept that a person's decision to alter behaviour, to make an effort to actually work on indicated aptitudes, to encourage their strengths and to fight their weaknesses have wrought the changes.

The Dominant hand (if they're right-handed) will show how a person has changed over time. The Non-Dominant hand shows what a person started out with and what their potential might be (and vice versa if they're left-handed).

This is just a basic guide to help you choose wisely if you're in the market for a new life partner. It provides pointers you would be sensible to look out for if you're thinking of moving a relationship to the next level. It's not cast in stone; as I said, people can and do change as dissimilar palm lines between Dominant and Non-Dominant hands make plain. But if certain traits are evident on BOTH palms, it's indicative that this particular person perhaps does not have the capacity to change.

Okay, while someone's romancing you, they'll be careful to keep their less attractive traits hidden; we all do it to an extent. But some traits are far less appealing and unlikely to lead to a successful romantic relationship than others.

For instance, does the non-dominant hand show certain tendencies? Tendencies like:

- * fecklessness with money
- * predisposition for unfaithfulness
- * if he's got the gambling bug and will bet your home on the turn of a card.
- * if he's got the opposite, but just as bad trait - being mean with money

These are all traits or potential traits -- especially if they're present in both hands -- which should warn you to be wary.

We all tend to wear rose-coloured spectacles when it comes to a new love interest. But please, just remove those glasses for a little so you can see what's there, either deliberately hidden from you or obscured by those rose-coloured spectacles. Then, there in the palms of his hands, you will see your lover's true personality.

Worth knowing, I think.
